QUESTION 2 TEXTUAL SOURCE ANALYSIS

This is an extract from the Sunday Times (Cape Edition) reporting on the assassination of Chris Hani in 1993. The article was published on 11 April 1993.

The ANC and the South African Communist Party yesterday appealed to their supporters to remain calm and restrained* following the assassination of Chris Hani. The ANC asked its members not to be provoked by those intent on wrecking the peace process … Nelson Mandela said Mr Hani … was a martyr to the cause of justice and peace. (Paragraph 1)

"His death demands of us that we pursue that cause with even greater determination," said Mr Mandela. "With all the authority at my command, I therefore appeal to all our people to remain calm and to honour the memory of Chris Hani by remaining a disciplined force for peace." (Paragraph 2)

The call for calm was reiterated* by Anglican Archbishop Desmond Tutu. "I want to make a call to our people: Please don't let them manipulate us. Don't let this tragic event trigger reprisals*. It is what somebody wants to see happen." (Paragraph 3)

The assassination of Mr Chris Hani … is an event so loaded with menace* that it requires political leaders on all sides to act swiftly, and in unison* to contain the tragedy. The killing … was surely intended to unleash into the delicate atmosphere of political transition, a new wave of passion and anger. Mr Hani was the target of the killer, but the aim, it must be assumed at this early stage, was to destroy the benign* spirit of the multiparty talks and to imperil* the transition to democracy. (Paragraph 4)

That benign* spirit was never more overtly displayed than during the past week in which both Mr Nelson Mandela and archbishop Tutu, on television, made brave and eloquent* pleas for peace, and for an end to the violence that wracks*… South Africa. (Paragraph 5)

[Adapted from: Cameron-Dow, J, 2014. A Newspaper History of South Africa. 5th ed. Cape Town: Don Nelson Publishers. p. 127]
